What Is FUT (Follicular Unit Transplantation)?

FUT, or Follicular Unit Transplantation, is a well-established hair restoration technique in which a narrow strip of donor hair is harvested from the back of the scalp and transplanted to thinning or balding areas. The procedure is performed under local anesthesia, with careful planning to ensure proper graft placement and consistent growth over time.

Benefits and Considerations of FUT Hair Transplantation

FUT Hair Transplant FAQ [H2 Heading]

Who is a good candidate for FUT Hair Transplant?

FUT is ideal for patients with sufficient healthy donor hair who want meaningful coverage. It's often suitable for those who need more grafts in a single procedure, have had previous transplants, or have strong donor density.

Will I have a visible scar after an FUT hair transplant?

Yes, FUT involves harvesting donor hair from the back of the scalp, which results in a linear scar. Scar visibility varies depending on individual healing and hairstyle preferences, and we'll discuss this with you in detail during your consultation.

Can I wear my hair short after an FUT procedure?

Many patients are able to wear their hair at moderate lengths after healing. Whether shorter styles are suitable depends on donor healing and your individual hair characteristics, which we'll review with you.

How soon can I return to work after an FUT hair transplant?

Return-to-work timing varies depending on your procedure and the type of work you do. We'll provide personalized guidance during your consultation and follow-up visits.

Will I need more than one FUT session?

Some patients achieve their desired results with a single FUT procedure, while others may pursue additional treatment over time. This depends on hair loss progression and your long-term goals.

How is the cost of an FUT hair transplant determined?

The cost of FUT is based on factors such as graft requirements, treatment complexity, and your individual goals. You'll receive a detailed estimate during your free consultation.

Will my results continue to look natural as I age?

FUT uses your own growing hair, allowing results to mature naturally. We take long-term planning into account so your results remain balanced as your hair changes over time.
